*Documents issued in other countries will have to be legalised by the diplomatic or consular authority in the issuing country or contain the Hague Apostille.

If the documents are written in a language other than Portuguese, Spanish, or English, an official and certified translation to one of these languages must be provided.

During the selection process, applicants may be asked to submit additional documents as evidence that they are prepared and qualified for the programme. Shortlisted applicants will be invited to a personal interview (face-to-face or online).

5. Presentation of the Application

Applicants can choose to apply to any one of the three institutions – the institution to which they apply will be where the students will spend the majority of the PhD time (known as 'home' institution). The application procedure at each institution is slightly different and is given on the relevant pages listed below.

Applying to FEPUCP/Portugal

Applications are submitted online, by filling in the form available at: <https://secretaria.porto.ucp.pt/CandidaturasOnline/default.aspx> or on Campus Foz - Universidade Católica Portuguesa (Porto).

Applying to FPCEE-URL/Spain

Applications are submitted online by filling in the form available at: <https://www.blanquerna.edu/en/PhD-applied-psychology>

Applying to NTU/UK

Full details, including the application form and required documents, can be found on the 'How to Apply' section of the Doctoral School webpage:

<https://www.ntu.ac.uk/research/research-degrees-at-ntu/how-to-apply>

On the application form under 'Title of Project', please enter 'International Ph.D. in Applied Psychology' in addition to the title of the proposed Ph.D.

6. Applications assessment, ranking criteria, and publication of the results

The selection and ranking of applicants will be carried out by the Steering Committee, comprising three co-coordinators (one from each partner University), and is based on the provided documents (Certificates, CV, Research proposal, letters of recommendation), as well as a personal interview. The criteria considered are as follows:

Criteria	Weight
Academic ability based on the Bachelor and Master academic transcripts	30%
Research experience and outputs	20%
Strength and relevance of the research proposal	20%
Other relevant merits (e.g., research grants, scholarships, training)	25%
Letter(s) of recommendation	5%

Ph.D. applicants who fulfil the admission criteria will be ranked based on the criteria and can enrol in any of the three universities depending on availability.

The results of each call will be published on our Admission's website and will be expressed as follows:

- "Accepted"
- "Provisionally Accepted" – the admission is dependent on one or more requirements
- "Not Accepted"

7. Programme Organization

The International PhD. Programme in Applied Psychology: Adaptation and change in contemporary societies corresponds to 180 ECTS credits and has a duration of 3 years (6 semesters).

The student will join a research group and develop a thesis within the framework of one of the research areas described in the programme. Each student will work on his or her thesis with a supervisory team consisting of three supervisors, one from each partner university.

Students enrol in one of the partner universities ("home institution"), where they spend most of their research time. When in FEPUCP, the course will take place on the premises of the Porto Regional Centre – Campus Foz; in FPCEE-URL, this will be at Blanquerna- Campus Cister; at NTU you will be based in the City Centre campus.

During the programme, students must spend 12 months (two semesters) at another partner university: those from URL and UCP at NTU, and those from NTU at UCP and/or at URL. Additionally, students may have a 1-6 months internship at the third university, depending on the needs of their research project.

Classes are scheduled to start in October 2021.

The language used for training, research and communication, as well as for the doctoral thesis manuscript, is English.
